

of lack of space. Our operating room is often forced to cancel and reschedule surgeries that families have been counting on for months.

Some have suggested that we should leave children out of the discussion around our expansion. Simply put — this IS about children — and many with complex medical needs like rare forms of cancer and cystic fibrosis that can only be met here. Imagine what it is like to tell a family that we have no bed for their sick or injured child. For more than two years, we worked closely with our Citizen's Advisory Committee (CAC), which consisted of volunteer members from several neighborhoods. Eight of the 18 were from Laurelhurst. We incorporated their valuable input into our efforts, changing our expansion plans eight times to incorporate ideas from several parties and in the end, the community process worked — both the CAC and the City's Department of Planning and Development recommended approval of our growth plan.

Throughout this otherwise productive process, some Laurelhurst Community Club members have made endless demands, requested continuous changes, filed several legal appeals and voiced consistent opposition to our hospital's need to grow. On behalf of everyone in this region who relies on Seattle Children's and our mission, I ask for your support. We are at capacity and the time for us to grow is now. Delay will cost lives if we do not move forward with a hospital growth plan this year. We invite you to see for yourself the strain our lack of capacity places on our families by watching the short video at masterplan.seattlechildrens.org. We would like to note that we have also received a great deal of support from the majority of Laurelhurst residents and we remain committed to being a good neighbor to the residents of Laurelhurst and to all of the communities in our area.

REAL ESTATE BY THE NUMBERS

The home buying business has changed dramatically over the past decade, according to data from the National Association of Realtors. The Chicago-based trade group for real estate agents said just 37 percent of buyers searched for a home online in 1999, compared to 90 percent today. According to the most recent existing-home data available from NAR, median home values have shot up more than 25 percent over the past decade to $172,600 last month. The home type and location have also changed. While 82 percent were buying detached, single family homes in 1999, that number has dropped to 78 percent. More people (54 percent) are flocking to suburban areas, compared to 46 percent in 1999. The profile of the home buyer is also different, with more single men and women becoming home buyers. While married couples made up 68 percent of all home purchases at the beginning of this century, they represent 60 percent of all buyers today. Single men bought 10 percent of all homes last year, compared to only 7 percent 10 years ago. Single women now represent 21 percent of all home buyers, up from 15 percent in 1999. Some statistics haven't changed: Top priorities in buying a house still include neighborhood quality, affordability and convenience to work and school.

TESTIMONIAL

Dear Roger,

I want to thank you for all the attention and support you gave to my husband and myself during a most difficult time in my life. That as you remember being the sale of the little house I grew up in after the sudden death of my father. Although I hadn't been to that home in many years prior to my daddy's death (as he rented it out), having to go there and find it in such poor status was more than I could bear. My father was very attached to that little house as was I so our value on the house was more sentimental than realistic.

Your part that is so appreciated isn't that you sold our little house in a timely and efficient manner but that you were so very patient with my unrealistic need to try to do what would have pleased my father. I knew in the very beginning that my price was too high but you made every effort to help me without making me feel foolish. At the same time you knew when I was approachable to suggest lowering my price.

Because of your kindness and patience, we were able to sell the house at a prime selling time and able to get a fair price that I can feel comfortable my father would have approved of. You not only were a great sales representative but a true friend. I hope that all of your clients can come to know you as my husband and I have and realize that they are in good hands. I would recommend your services highly. In closing I would also like to make note of your willingness to meet with us so far out of your way as we live in Tacoma and the house we were selling was in your area.

I also liked how many times you offered to get your hands dirty by checking on the house for us or doing some odd job that definitely was above the call of a real estate broker and agent. I have the highest esteem for your moral values and your honesty. You don't come across as the stereotyped fast talking salesman we dealt with before we chose you to be our rep. Just a humble daddy and husband doing his job.

Roger, we want you to know how much you have come to mean to our family and hope that you'll stay in touch. God Bless your family. You deserve it! Thanks again for your help.

Your friends,
Kyle and Barbara Hartman

SOLD HOMES

The following is a list of homes that sold in our Maple Leaf Neighborhood over the last 2 months. Do you wonder what your house is worth? The décor, the features and condition all have a bearing on the price a house will command. I have seen the interiors of most of the homes in this list. If you are selling your home, please let me help you. I would be happy to view your home, prepare a market analysis and discuss the details with you. I can provide you with useful information, such as a sales price that might be realistically expected in today's market.

BUYING, SELLING, INVESTING, IMPROVING REAL ESTATE AMONG 2010 RESOLUTIONS

Real estate is high on the resolutions list of many Americans, according to a survey by Move.com.

Nearly 18 percent of Americans want to become first-time home buyers. Move.com found these prospective owners are looking to take advantage of affordable housing prices along with the recent extension and expansion of the home buyer's tax credit.

A total of 15.7 percent of home buyers listed purchasing an investment property as their top resolution, with men (18.9 percent) significantly more likely than women (12.6 percent) to say that they will be searching for an investment property. The survey also revealed gaps between men and women with regard to plans to save money for a new home in 2010. Thirty-seven percent of men said it will be a top priority while only 27.9 percent of women agreed.

Home improvement is a priority for 37.7 percent of survey respondents, while nearly one in 10 (9.1 percent) say their major goal for 2010 is to fix their credit so they can buy a home. Among other survey findings:

- 15.4% of the survey's respondents said saving money to buy a home is their top priority.
- 6.8% want to refinance their mortgage or modify a loan.

CONSUMERS PICK AESTHETICS OVER ENERGY EFFICIENCIES

It would take a spike of $129 a month in energy bills to prompt consumers to make energy-efficient home improvements, according to a new national survey. The fifth annual Energy Pulse® survey found consumers have good intentions for undertaking energy-saving renovations, but poor follow-through. The firm that conducted the research dubbed the phenomenon the "Apathy Gap," the price people are willing to pay to do nothing.

Pollsters found consumers are willing to watch their energy bills increase by more than 70 percent, on average, before feeling compelled to make energy-efficient home improvements.

"Consumers are willing to waste more than $1,500 a year, or more than $4 a day, before they'll take action," said Suzanne Shelton, whose company, Shelton Group, conducted the study.

Shelton noted for the wasted $1,500, a homeowner could install insulation or purchase one or two new ENERGY STAR® appliances and start seeing immediate savings.

Consumers who participated in the survey were asked to choose two home improvements if they were given $10,000. In 2008, the top choices were energy-related, but the most recent results showed consumers preferred projects that improved their home's appearance:

Improvement	2009	2008
Refinish the kitchen or bathroom	37%	26%
Replace carpet or add hardwood or tile	33%	25%
Replace windows	31%	35%
Replace HVAC/furnace	23%	27%

"Anyone selling energy-efficient products must either focus heavily on the aesthetic or comfort aspects of their products or play up their environmental benefits in a big way," Shelton suggested in response to the feedback.

Surveys over the past five years show consistently large discrepancies between intentions and actions, Shelton said. Every year, for example, around 20 percent or more consumers say they're planning to get an energy audit, yet the percentage of U.S. homeowners who've actually gotten one has languished in the 10-15 percent range, prompting the firm to refer to home energy audits as the "colonoscopy" of energy efficiency. "Everyone knows they should get one, but too few actually do," Shelton quipped.

The Shelton Group also found considerable pent-up demand for solar power. Surveyors asked, "How likely would you be to buy a solar electricity system for your home, knowing that a mid-size system that would provide around 63% of the average household's electricity, costs $35,000 to $40,000 that could be offset by a $2,000 federal tax incentive along with additional rebates in many states?" Twenty-eight percent said they would be likely or very likely to buy such a system. Less than 1 percent reported they already had such a system.

"Consumers have been waiting for solar to become more accessible and more affordable," Shelton remarked. Now, she believes, "With prices projected to fall even further, and with enhanced federal tax incentives – up to 30% of the cost of the system for qualifying taxpayers- solar power will be on the rise." The survey polled 504 Americans by telephone in September.

UPDATE ON CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL AND THE FIGHT WITH LAURELHURST

Please become a friend of Seattle Children's Hospital visit <http://www.friendsofchildrenshospital.org/home.php>

THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION WAS TAKEN FROM <http://www.friendsofchildrenshospital.org/home.php>

Check out the video that was prepared by Children's and shared with the Hearing Examiner on March 5, 2009 as part of the master plan process. The video helps illustrate the need to grow by showing the challenges of its current facilities and the strain often felt by patients, families and staff due to increasingly high patient volumes.

On November 18th, the Seattle City Council Planning, Land Use and Neighborhoods Committee (PLUNC) held its first meeting to discuss Seattle Children's expansion and more than 100 supporters packed the Council Chambers.

The committee proceeded to lay out the fair schedule we were hoping for to address Seattle Children's expansion.

The committee held a discussion on the expansion on Wednesday, January 13th and continued discussing the expansion at two other meetings in January and two meetings in February until the committee feels it can make a recommendation to Council as a whole.

KEY POINTS TO CONSIDER:

THE NEED IS IMMEDIATE

- Children's has been operating at or near capacity. So far this year, the hospital has had to turn away 79 seriously ill children for lack of beds.
- Children's admits and treats all sick children, regardless of their family's ability to pay.
- Last year alone, Children's treated 9,274 sick children whose families could not afford the full cost of their healthcare.

THE COMMUNITY PROCESS WORKED

- Both the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) and the Department of Planning & Development (DPD) recommended approval of Children's master plan after the two year review process.
- The CAC was a representative body of five surrounding neighborhoods – Montlake, Ravenna, Bryant, Laurelhurst and View Ridge – which engaged in an arduous process to create the balance required by the code. Denial of the master plan would regrettably undo the hard work of these community members who recommended approval of the master plan.
- Children's has worked closely with the CAC and DPD to develop a mutually agreeable master plan. The process included nearly 30 public CAC meetings, eight major revisions of the Master Plan, and a package of mitigation measures to lessen impacts to the surrounding communities including traffic improvements throughout Northeast Seattle.

THERE CAN BE A BALANCE BETWEEN CHILDREN'S NEEDS AND COMMUNITY NEEDS IN SEATTLE

- Children's has submitted a plan that asks for what it needs over the next 20 years or so. A smaller expansion would not meet the hospital's long-term healthcare needs. If the City Council turned down Children's master plan, Children's would be forced to consider all options; regrettably, even the gradual relocation of facilities outside of Seattle.

SEATTLE CHILDREN'S IS AN ECONOMIC ENGINE FOR OUR REGION

- Children's is one of the top ten pediatric hospitals in the U.S. and employs more than 4,000 people, many of whom live and work in the city of Seattle.
- In this economy, Seattle could benefit from the creation of additional healthcare and construction jobs associated with Children's expansion. If Children's has to leave Seattle, many of the economic benefits will go elsewhere in the Puget Sound Region.
- The potential relocation and construction of a full service pediatric medical facility elsewhere in the region would result in unnecessary delays in meeting the healthcare needs of our sickest children and drive up healthcare costs.

As pediatrician-in-chief at Seattle Children's Hospital, I read the recent letter in the Puget Sound Business Journal from Laurelhurst Community Club member Colleen McGinn ("City should oppose Seattle Children's expansion plan," published October 9) with great dismay

In her letter, McGinn claimed that our expansion plan is excessive, and that Children's has refused to work with the Laurelhurst Community Club.

The facts are crystal clear: We are at capacity and running out of beds. Delays to our expansion will put children's lives at risk. For all families throughout the region, this is unacceptable.

We are operating at or near capacity daily and we have yet to hit peak flu season. We've turned away 79 seriously ill children already this year because

TÉT FESTIVAL - VIETNAMESE LUNAR NEW YEAR

FEBRUARY 6-7, 2010 | SEATTLE CENTER HOUSE, FISHER PAVILION

Celebrate with Seattle's Vietnamese community at the Tết Nguyên Đán festival and usher in the "Year of the Ox." This annual Lunar New Year celebration welcomes the return of spring and chases out evil spirits with the traditional roaring lion dance and the crackle of firecrackers. Tết 2009 celebrates the theme - Youth and Dreams - through exhibits, children's interactive arts and crafts, musical programs, fantastic food; and special this year, the Miss Washington competition. These festival highlights allow celebrants to reflect on the past year and make plans for the arrival of the dependable, calm, hard working and prosperous ox. Presented by Têt in Seattle.
