

STEVE LAEVASTU & ROGER TURNER ARE YOUR RAVENNA REALTORS

ratify and confirm Council President Conlin's signature on the document thereby allows the SDEIS to go forward to the public for comments. This action ensures the City to remain as co-lead on the SDEIS.

"I am pleased that my colleagues are ready to reaffirm the City's policy position that we have had for nine years, as a partner with the State on this critical project," commented Council President Conlin. "We had no idea that our co-lead status was in jeopardy until the Mayor's actions last Thursday raised that possibility.

"My signature signals Council interest in remaining as a co-lead during the SDEIS process, confirming our policy to remain as a co-lead through this ordinance. WSDOT, as the responsible entity, will certify when the SDEIS is complete. None of these actions usurp the power of the Executive and there has been no Charter violation. The City Council can determine City policy to remain as co-lead and will continue to do so.

"We are not just standing by on the sidelines. We are a very strong partner and numerous City staff are engaged in the constant review of this project."

The "ratify and confirm" clause is a standard element in the codification of City policy by ordinance, which allows action to be taken in a timely fashion when there is not time for the Council legislative process to be completed. At the Council's September 20, 2010 meeting, for example, four of the ordinances that were approved by the Council included ratify and confirm clauses.

PETE HOLMES' STATEMENT ON ALASKAN WAY VIADUCT REPLACEMENT

I'd like to try to ease the tension that followed City Council President Richard Conlin's Sept. 23 signature on the Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Statement (SDEIS) for the Alaskan Way Viaduct Replacement Project.

Conlin's signature demonstrates his intent for the City to remain as a co-lead agency during the state's EIS process. His signature does not certify that the SDEIS meets the legal standards for a EIS. As nominal lead agency, the Washington State Department of Transportation (WSDOT) has the primary responsibility for determining whether the SDEIS is adequate.

Because Conlin's signature does not purport to certify the adequacy of the SDEIS, it is not an affront to the executive authority of Mayor Mike McGinn. The signature neither binds the City nor impedes the mayor's powers.

Conlin's signature will have the effect that WSDOT and the City Council want it to have consistent with other laws. I understand that today the City Council is introducing an ordinance that would ratify and confirm the City's intent to remain as co-lead agency.

To Whom It May Concern:

Roger Turner helped me with the sale of my house in Seattle. The house sold for more than I expected. Roger lived up to his promises and helped me in many ways, always showing his professionalism.

My neighbors suddenly had health problems and had to sell out. They were surprised how quickly Roger closed the sale of my home and asked him to help them. He sold their home in one day.

His honest and workmanship will not be forgotten.

Sincerely,
Ralph McNeil

SEATTLE CITY COUNCIL SEEKS RESIDENT FEEDBACK DURING 2011 - 2012 BUDGET PROCESS

The City of Seattle faces a $67 million general fund deficit for 2011, meaning there are some very difficult budget decisions to be made in the months to come. As the City Council works to balance the Seattle's 2011-2012 budget, considerable input from residents is needed to develop a budget that best reflects the needs of our city.

In advance of this work, the Seattle City Council invites you to participate in this year's budget process:

DID YOU KNOW: HOMEOWNERSHIP BY AGE GROUP

The national homeownership rate peaked in 2004, but has since fallen in every age group. Homeownership slipped the most in the under 35 age group. This group had a homeownership rate of 43.1% at the market's peak in 2004 before declining to 39.1% in the second quarter of 2010, a difference of 4.1 percentage points. Younger buyers tend to have less in savings and are more susceptible to changes in employment.

HEALING HOOVES GOATS MUNCH BLACKBERRY BUSHES AT NORTH SUBSTATION

The Roosevelt/Maple Leaf Neighborhood's favorite vegetation management team is came back to Seattle City Light's North Substation the 1st week of September to munch blackberry bushes in a four-day cleanup.

Up to 280 goats from Healing Hooves visited the substation from Monday, Aug. 30, through Friday, Sept. 3, to remove blackberry bushes and ivy that have grown on the steep, rocky hillside since the herd's last trip.

"Goats have been a creative, affordable solution for removing this vegetation," said Betsey Searing, landscape supervisor for City Light. "It's environmentally friendly. No chemicals and no dump fees."

Seattle City Light has been using Healing Hooves (<http://www.healing-hooves.com/>) since 2006, to clear the substation's one acre grounds of noxious weeds that grow where it's difficult for humans to clear them safely.

"The blackberry bushes are lush and full of berries," Searing said. "The goats will be getting dessert with their meal."

NEIGHBORS LOVE THE GOATS.

Many who live nearby visited the substation to watch the goats or talk to the goat herder, Craig Madsen. They have even held an impromptu block party for him. City Light consistently receives many compliments from neighbors on both the clearing of the brush and the use of the goats in place of more traditional vegetation controls.

During their work at the substation, the goats are kept in a fenced enclosure and will not roam outside of the area to be cleared, except to move to a livestock trailer. The shepherd uses a border collie to help herd the goats back and forth, and a portable electrified livestock fence keeps the goats away from the substation's electrical equipment as well as the street. The entire area is enclosed by a chain link fence and isn't accessible to the public.

Seattle City Light is the 10th largest public electric utility in the United States. It has some of the lowest cost customer rates of any urban utility, providing reliable, renewable and environmentally responsible power to nearly 1 million Seattle area residents. City Light has been greenhouse gas neutral since 2005, the first electric utility in the nation to achieve that distinction.

HOUSING AFFORDABILITY REMAINS HIGH

Favorable interest rates and low prices contributed to a near record level of housing affordability for the second quarter of 2010, according to a widely watched index.

The National Association of Home Builders/Wells Fargo Housing Opportunity Index (HOI), released in mid-August, shows housing affordability remained near its highest level nationwide for the sixth consecutive quarter. It indicates 72.3 percent of all new and existing homes sold in the second quarter of 2010 were affordable to families earning the national median income of $64,400.

Metropolitan areas within the State of Washington that are included in the HOI and their rankings include:

Area	Median Price	HOI	National Rank	Regional Rank
Bellingham	$239,000	55.1	206	53
Bremerton-Silverdale	$230,000	47.7	99	21
Olympia	$205,000	59.2	78	12
Seattle-Bellevue-Everett	$311,000	40.1	111	24
Tacoma	$224,000	46.4	104	22

The index for the second quarter was slightly more affordable than the previous quarter and almost equaled the record-high 72.5 percent set during the first quarter of 2009. Until 2009, the HOI rarely topped 67 percent and never reached 70 percent.

"Homeownership is within reach of more households than it has been for almost a generation," said NAHB Chairman Bob Jones, a home builder from Bloomfield Hills, Mich. "Interest rates continue to hover at historic low levels, the economy is beginning to rebound and with house prices starting to stabilize, conditions are beginning to draw home buyers back into the market, which is a positive step on the path to recovery."

Syracuse, N.Y., where 97.2 percent of all homes sold were affordable to households earning the area's median family income, was the most affordable major housing market in the country. It edged out Indianapolis-Carmel, Ind., which had held the top ranking for nearly five years.

New York-White Plains-Wayne, N.Y.-N.J., maintained its position as the nation's least affordable major housing market, a distinction it has held for nine consecutive quarters. There, 19.9 percent of all homes sold during the quarter were affordable to those earning the New York area's median income.

Among other metro areas near the bottom of the affordability scale and the HOIs were San Francisco-San Mateo-Redwood City (21), Santa Ana-Anaheim-Irvine (32.9), Los Angeles-Long Beach-Glendale (33.3) and Honolulu (35).
